

Wisconsin Medicaid Fact Sheet

Medicaid Extension

You will not automatically lose Medicaid when changes in your situation are reported. You may be able to keep your Medicaid coverage for up to 12 months through a Medicaid extension.

A Medicaid Extension is Possible if:

- Your Medicaid eligibility ends because of changes in your household situation, and your income increases because you or someone in your family gets:
 - ☐ A new job.
 - ☐ A raise in pay.
 - ☐ Increased hours of work.
 - ☐ Increased child support payments.

OR

- Your current Medicaid eligibility ends and one of the following pertains to you:
 - ☐ You are pregnant and your pregnancy ends.
 - ☐ Your baby is born and the baby lives with you.

Remember: Medicaid is available to people in many different family situations. Always tell your worker about any change in your family situation when it happens. This will enable the worker to check to see if you or your children may remain on Medicaid. Do not assume your Medicaid coverage will end.
